POTTERY BARN KIDS

Like its adult counterpart, Pottery Barn Kids abides by a cheery, country-home aesthetic—evidenced by overstuffed armchairs and gingham-lined catchalls, which are perfect for stashing toys. And check out the Stylehouse section of its website, which is loaded with useful decorating how-tos (like how to transition your child from a crib to a bed).

BURT'S BEES

This is one of those beauty brands that are so good (i.e., beautifully packaged and effective), we'd buy its products even if they weren't natural. But Burt's Bees' all-green ethos gets extra points, particularly when its lotions and bubble baths are destined for the skin of kids. Bonus: Many of the products contain vanilla extract, which acts as a mild relaxant on little ones.
